Oakland Women Take Over

With Mayor Libby Schaaf's selection of Sabrina Landreth as city administrator, the city will be run by two female Oakland natives who not only agree on the issues, but also absolutely love The Town.

By Robert Gammon

One of the downsides of former Mayor Jean Quan's administration was her selection of a city administrator — Deanna Santana — whose managerial style and political views were significantly different than those of the mayor. [illegible]

New Mayor Libby Schaaf appears to have learned from that lesson. [illegible]

Kid U Me?

We're pleased to introduce the Express' new weekly parenting column, Kid U Me?, featuring four fantastic East Bay columnists — Meghan Lewis, Tasha Schoen, Deb Levine, and Armin Brott — who are each experts in different aspects of parenting. The columnists will rotate each week responding to readers' questions, exploring topics within their fields of expertise, and sharing fun and educational activities for kids and families in the Bay Area.

- Meghan Lewis is the founder of Integrative Perinatal Psychotherapy with offices in Oakland and San Francisco specializing in preconception, pregnancy, birth, postpartum, and early parenting. She is also the founding member of LGBTQ Perinatal Wellness Association of the Bay Area. Meghan served on the Board of Berkeley's BirthWays and is currently on the Advisory Board of Oakland's Then Comes Baby.
- Tasha Schoen's field of interest is positive parenting. The longtime former Oakland resident is particularly focused on issues related to raising boys, sibling rivalries, and helping children work through their fears.
- Deb Levine, an Oakland resident, is an expert on parenting tweens and teens. She's also a health commissioner at the California State PTA and was on the Curriculum Review Task Force for Oakland Unified School District. Her work was cited in President Clinton's Advisory Council Report on Education and the Internet.
- Armin Brott, who also lives in Oakland, writes a weekly syndicated column called "Ask Mr. Dad." He brings a male perspective to parenting, and his work has appeared in The New York Times Magazine, Newsweek, American Baby, Parenting, Child, Men's Health, and the Washington Post.

The column also will be accompanied by a curated list of top events and activities for kids and families each week.

Look for it weekly starting in March 2015!
